

Wealth Planning Report

Financial Planning for a Special Needs Child

Raising children and grandchildren is challenging in the best of circumstances. But when a child has special needs or a disability, the hurdles can look more like mountains and the potholes can feel more like bottomless pits.

That's especially true when it comes to paying for the many expenses that can accompany raising a special needs child as well as positioning assets for the child's future.

The good news: There are savvy financial moves that parents and grandparents of special needs children can make that may potentially deliver big benefits to both themselves and their kids—today, tomorrow and down the road.

Multiple financial challenges

Parents of special needs children can face some unique financial concerns. For example, a child's special needs often are identified when problems occur after the child is born—giving parents no advance warning or time to look into what it could take financially to address the issue. Also, while many health care needs require a one-time expense, special needs health care expenses are often ongoing—requiring monthly, weekly or even daily services that could be needed for years.

What's more, those ongoing costs might be highly inconsistent from year to year—making it even harder to plan.

Navigating today's expenses

Smart financial planning around special needs involves thinking about the foreseeable road ahead, along with the distant and more uncertain future.

Start with some basic wealth planning, such as budgeting. In addition, many families qualify for financial help from government agencies. One example: Monthly Supplemental Security Income (SSI) is available to some individuals who meet the SSI disability standard.

Important: Don't assume you earn too much or are too wealthy to get any benefits. The rules can vary from state to state, making it possible you'll qualify for some amount of assistance.

That said, it's important to look to more advanced solutions. One tool to consider: an ABLE account—essentially a 529-like savings plan to help families caring for children or adults with disabilities. ABLE account contributions grow tax-free and withdrawals are tax-free when used for qualified disability expenses. Anyone can contribute to an ABLE account, including grandparents.

Another key benefit of ABLE accounts is that the contributions are shielded from asset-based limits that could jeopardize an individual's ability to access government assistance. That means an ABLE account could be a good way to provide financially for a special needs child without making a direct financial gift to him or her that could jeopardize access to other financial support.

However, there are some potential downsides. Example: If the ABLE account exceeds $100,000, the individual is no longer eligible for SSI.

WEALTH PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE

Special needs financial planning also has to address estate planning, in the event you die and are unable to care for your child.

Often, parents who want to help ensure their special needs child will be taken care of after they're gone will set up a special needs trust that's designed to hold and safeguard assets to benefit the child. (That said, parents also set up these trusts while still alive to help supplement the cost of care.) The trust can be set up with terms and language for how and when the money should be used, although keep in mind that many specific terms must be met for the trust to be deemed acceptable. And as with many other types of trusts, a special needs trust can potentially protect assets if the child is sued or becomes divorced at some point.

In general, there are two main types of special needs trusts that most families with assets to invest tend to consider:

- A first-party trust is set up when the assets contributed to the trust belong to the beneficiary—that is, your special needs child or grandchild. This can happen if the child inherits wealth or gets money from a legal settlement. The beneficiary is considered to be the owner of the assets in this scenario. The good news is that when those assets are put into a special needs trust, they're excluded from government aid calculations determining eligibility for the types of benefits noted above. The bad news: As with the ABLE account, when the beneficiary dies, the government can claim assets still in the trust to reimburse it for payments it made.
- A third-party trust is used when the funding assets come from parents, grandparents or anyone other than the beneficiary (who in this case would not be considered the owner of the assets). A third-party trust also allows a beneficiary to retain his or her government assistance—but because the assets contributed belong to someone else, the government won't seek to collect remaining assets when the beneficiary dies. The upshot: A third-party trust gives you more flexibility to transfer remaining wealth to another beneficiary (such as another child or a charity).

(A third type of trust, a pooled trust, is aimed at families with relatively modest assets.)

As with other trusts, you must carefully consider who is the right person to name as trustee and how to best fund the special needs trust—two issues we'll explore in a future report that focuses on special needs trusts.

Conclusion

There are a number of steps that families with special needs children can take to help ease the financial burden of ensuring their children get the care they need, as well as set their children up for better and more stable financial lives as they grow up.

Of course, there is no one-size-fits-all answer given that one family's particular situation can be quite different from another's. But for families experiencing the confusion and uncertainty that accompany raising a special needs child, knowing that there are options to consider can be a helpful foundation from which to create a plan for today and well into the future. And if you need help, seek out an experienced CFP professional.

This is an executive summary of our wealth management ebook. For a complimentary copy of our complete report, please contact us.

Paul Byron Hill, MBA, MFP, MSFS, ChFC®, RICP®, CFP® is a nationally recognized Wealth Management Certified Professional™ and Certified Financial Planner™ professional, written about in Fortune, Forbes, Bloomberg Businessweek, and Money. As co-author of Retire Abundantly, Paul was interviewed by James Malinchak, of ABC-TV's hit series, Secret Millionaire. Reuters AdvisePoint recognized Mr. Hill as one of 500 "Top Advisers" in the U.S. and has featured him on their website.

Paul founded Professional Financial Strategies, Inc. in 1993 as one of the first fiduciary planning firms that specializes in retirement and wealth management for affluent and aspiring families. Paul is a personal chief financial officer acting in best interest of clients. He brings together a proven process and a network of specialists for making informed decisions for structured strategies, securing income, mitigating taxes, protecting assets, and preserving wealth for family and purposeful causes.

Mr. Hill received a BA with distinction from the University of Rochester and later an MBA in finance from its Simon School of Business. He earned an MS in financial services from The American College along with his Chartered Financial Consultant and Retirement Income Certified Professional designations, and then received an MS in financial planning from the College for Financial Planning (now at the University of Phoenix). The College for Financial Planning appointed him as adjunct faculty, and he has taught at St. John Fisher College. Who's Who presented Paul with the Albert Nelson Marquis Lifetime Achievement Award, and featured him with others in The Wall Street Journal and other publications.

Disclosure: Professional Financial Strategies, Inc. is an independent investment advisor registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. CFP® professionals are fiduciaries with a duty of loyalty and care to act in clients' best interests and are licensed by the Certified Financial Planner Board of Standards. A copy of the Firm's Form ADV disclosure brochure and Form CRS discussing services, processes, and a schedule of fees is available upon request.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT: This article was adapted from material prepared by Virtual Family Office Inner Circle, a global financial concierge group working with affluent individuals and families and is distributed with permission. Copyright 2020 by AES Nation, LLC. This report is intended for educational purposes only and no discussion or information contained serves as the receipt of, or as a substitute for, personalized investment advice. Professional Financial Strategies, Inc. is neither a law firm nor a certified public accounting firm, and so no portion of this content should be construed as legal or accounting advice. Paul Byron Hill and Professional Financial are not affiliated with AES Nation, LLC.

Note Limitations: Neither rankings and/or recognitions by unaffiliated rating services, publications, media, or other organizations, nor the achievement of any professional designation, certification, degree, or license, membership in any professional organization, or any amount of prior experience or success, should be construed by a client or prospective client as a guarantee that he/she will experience a certain level of results if Professional Financial is engaged, or continues to be engaged, to provide investment advisory services. Rankings published by magazines, and others, generally base their selections exclusively on information prepared and/or submitted by the recognized adviser and are generally limited to participating advisers. Unless expressly indicated to the contrary, the firm did not pay a fee to be included on any such ranking. No ranking or recognition should be construed as a current or past endorsement by any of its clients.

Please see important disclosure information at the Professional Financial website.

Professional Financial Strategies, Inc. | 1159 Pittsford-Victor Road, Suite 120, Pittsford, NY 14534 | (585) 218-9080